Travis joined the firm in 2025 as an associate attorney. Before joining Childress Ahlheim Cary LLC, Travis worked as a policy advisor to United States Senator Martin Heinrich, with expertise in several policy areas, including immigration, the judiciary, and military affairs. After his time working in the United States Senate, Travis relocated to St. Louis, Missouri, where he worked at a defense firm focusing his practice defending businesses, individuals, and insurers throughout the state of Missouri. His background representing individuals and businesses in complex litigation and mass torts provides Travis with the insight and understanding into the successful representation of his clients throughout the litigation process.

In his spare time, Travis enjoys spending time with his family, playing golf, and supporting all of St. Louis' many sports teams.
